Reply comments of Amy E. Ingram

I agree with the comments made by Americans for Radio Diversity about RM-9242; that one watt is not enough for 'community radio' -reaching only about a mile- this might be good for 'neighborhood or church' radio -But not to 'serve the community'. I believe that owners should be required to live within a 30 mile radius to their stations -so someone in L.A. couldn't be dictating what people in Timbuktu 'should be' listening to. There should be a limit to the number of stations that one person or company can own, for the same reasons as above. These stations should be required to play a certain percentage of local; music, plays, editorials, and comments etc. Most Importantly, I believe that the FCC should grant amnesty to currently unlicensed community broadcasters out of the LEGALITY of them exercising their 1st amendment RIGHTS procured for all Americans by our fore-fathers.
