Subject: Suggestions for your law on unlicensed radio

Dear FCC,

I really seriously think you should reconsider your law on low-power radio. Low power radio gives interesting, fine, programming to local communities, I thought that was what the FCC was about? Today's radio does not do that. The only way a guy like me could apply for a license is if I owned a 1,000,000 dollar company[CBS, Greater Media] I think it's unfair. I know this is just one message, but there a lot of people out there who think the same. Sure, the stations that interfere with other licensed stations, or aircraft and marine radio should be shut down, but most do not. That's what the FCC is all about, that's what radio is all about? Right? Or can only million dollar companies own radio stations?
