

I am writing in support of the proposed regulations for low-power radio stations, 99-25. We need a greater diversity of voices on our radio stations and we must resist the efforts of corporations, the NAB and NPR who feel their virtual monopoly is being challenged. Their content is bland and standardized. We need a greater diversity of voices on the airwaves and more community-based programming. These regulations will allow this. The airwaves are the property of the American people, not elite corporate broadcasters. We must reverse the centralized control of radio by those who could care less about local communities except to get their money. This must be a two-way street. Please push these regulations through. Thanks.
