

I'm in strong support of opening up the airwaves to smaller stations. Of course big business doesn't support it; they don't support anything that promotes a true sense of democracy. Unfortunately, I don't have millions to wine and dine you in favor of my vote. If this measure is struck down, I'll see it as just one more way in which a supposed democracy is really a system owned by big business, a system to serve their needs, not those of the people.
