

Two wrongs do not make one right; never have, never will!
In 1996 the FCC succumbed to a few power brokers with a lot of money and passed the infamous 1996 Telecommunications Act. Radio consolidation had begun. Now to right that wrong Chairman Kennard wants to flood the FM airwaves with hundreds or thousands of low power FM stations to appease the disenfranchised. Why is the FCC so dedicated to destroying the radio business from both ends when the correct answer is so obvious? If the FCC in its infinite wisdom would simply limit the consolidators to two or three stations in each defined radio market, there would be plenty of FM stations available for everyone and diversity of ownership and programming would be assured.
