

To Whom It May Concern:

Since my internet browser crashed the last time I tried to send this, I'll keep it short this time:

The current Los Angeles radio situation is horrifying. We live in what is theoretically the entertainment capitol of the world, but radio stations that are supposedly in competition with each other (specifically, KROQ and Y-107) have nearly the exact same format, the exact same playlist, and on occasion, play exactly the same song at the same time. It's ridiculous that conglomerates with no imagination be allowed to control our tastes with the narrow band of music they find satisfying.

Please consider Low Power Radio Service - it would create a viable alternative to the corporate idea of entertainment, enrich the communities in which it was implemented, and allow us, the American people, some brief measure of freedom of choice in our listening habits.

Sincerely,

Colin McComb
