

It with interest and hope that I am following the possible institution of FCC rules regarding low power F.M. radio stations. I have for some time desired to have the ability to operate a small radio station for our community here in Livingston Texas. Although we have a regular C/W station here, I am interested in providing a Christian music and ministry format that is especially targeted toward youth. There is so much now available in this area of ministry in the larger metropolitan area, and I have a desire to bring it to our small community. Our population is between 5,000 and 7,000. It would be extremely unlikely, if not impossible, to start such an endeavor, with the possible exception of low power F.M. I feel that this would serve our smaller communities well, as well as smaller entrepreneurs and minorities that would not otherwise have a chance. Once the technical aspects are worked out, I urge you to give special weight to implementing rules which allow low power F.M. stations to exist. Thank you.

Sincerely, Rev. Martin Oeschler
