

I would just like to say that I am currently student engineer of a small college station that only broadcasts on the internet and we have been trying to fill out the paperwork but we have no desire to go over a 1000 watts we were looking more at 500, are current goal is for the students to hear us. So current standards make it hard for us to even fill out the paperwork because none of it applies to us. Low Power is all we want but it seems we cannot get that currently, making he new classification would help us and many small groups like us.

Thank you
