

I support the creation of a low power radio service. It should mostly be oriented around non-commercial use, while allowing some flexibility for generating income through advertising. It is vital that there be safeguards that prevent it from being usurped by existing broadcast interests. Also, it is important to make provisions continue the service in future areas such as digital broadcasting.

I'm not associated with the broadcasting industry. I'm just a citizen in a small town near Boston that I think would be well served by its own radio station, perhaps run out of the local Senior Center.
