

Opening low power radio stations is a great idea who's time has come. The possibilities for business, personal and community use to distribute information that big time media doesn't offer -or won't offer is very great. On the internet you find a great explosion of new information sources. This has help our democracy by offering internet users access to this new opinions. The big problem with the internet is that not everyone can afford a computer. Almost everyone can afford a radio.
