

The fact that people are getting into trouble by having their own "pirate radio" stations is enough to justify allowing the existence of having low power broadcast stations. I myself would have such a station if it were allowed. I do recommend, however, that there be some licensing restraints that requires proper education of how to operate such a station, else commercial products will appear that are easy to operate without any knowledge of radio or any conscienciousness about the proper operation of the station.

Said another way, I suggest this priviledge go along with the Amateur Radio Service.

Thanks,

Chris Ruffin KD5CRB