

I fully support licensing low power FM stations. The standard FM broadcast spectrum (~88-108 MHz) is woefully under-utilized - look what happened to the Web, where individuals can create their own content for the world - there is no reason the FM band cannot be similarly enriched. On the flip side, it may only be actions like this that keep this traditional FM band commercially viable, once the Web acquires a wireless face.

Tom