

Concerning the proposal for licensing low-power FM stations...

The youth of America learn through media. However, they are not exposed to much diversity in modern radio (with several exceptions around large cities). Allowing more variety through public radio will at least slow "pop-culture cloning," and cause audiences to expand their fermenting minds. I strongly support this effort!