licenses should be granted at a low cost to nonprofit community organizations. If existing radio stations are concerned about disrupting their current listener base, I suggest to them that they are not serving the needs/wants of these people. This is a capitalist society and competition rules. Just because they have an expensive license does not give them a monopoly on the market. We need small community broadcasters to serve the real needs of the public not just large commercial broadcasters serving the needs of their corporations and advertisers. Thanks for having this discussion.
