

I operate a small independent record label, Smokehouse Records, in Dayton, Ohio that specializes in regional music. We have had a modicum of success via reviews and word of mouth for our Americana artists Electric Range but are stifled at commercial radio. This is great music that has no radio outlet. Help! Musicians and business folks need LPFM to survive. With playlists shrinking at commercial radio the small businessman/woman who has product, like mine, that is state of the art and equal at all levels to the major labels is going to fold if something isn't done to even the field. Radio programmers who sit in offices in L.A. or NY and program stations in towns they've never been to has ruined radio for me. Help breath new life into this service by opening up new broadcast outlets- LPFM !!
