

Low Power FM radio would allow smaller independent musicians and music companies to reach an audience neglected by the commercial radio establishment. This would be accomplished in a way similar to the expansion of internet and cable/satellite radio where audiences often neglected by commercial and standard broadcast media are reached successfully but without the need to purchase or lease special equipment or subscribe to special delivery services (cable, satellite or internet).