

It's becoming increasingly difficult information on local events to be disseminated within communities. I think think low-power radio would be an excellent means of disseminating this kind of information. Radio today is aimed at consumers, and not so much to active citizens. The needs of working people are not addressed, the needs of politically active are not addressed, and in general the public interest is not well-served.

I want radio that has more meaning to my particular life.