

My name is Donna Kelly Gray. Every year since May 1979, I have been on the radio as an announcer. For 20 of those 25 years, I worked for several stations in Skowhegan, Maine. I built a house and I have become an active member of the community. However, since the FCC changed the rules of station ownership, one corporation - Cumulus Broadcasting, has bought all the stations and is moving them away. I am writing in support of microbroadcasting. The small communities like Skowhegan are being abandoned by these big corporate stations. When the stations leave, they are no longer present to serve the communities needs. Microbroadcasters can fill this void. I also think for the good of the communities, these microbroadcasting frequencies must be non-commercial. Please make microbroadcasting legal as soon as you can.

Thank you,
Donna K. Gray
