

Dear Chairman Kennard,
I am writing in regards to MM Docket No. 99-25 (Low-Power Radio FM Radio). I fully support the FCC's efforts to establish LPFM and wholeheartedly endorse the comments submitted by the Minority Media and Telecommunications Council on this subject.

Because of my efforts to create a non-profit radio documentary training center for minority youths in New York City, I have been meeting many teens who are interested in learning more about radio. One way to help train them is to establish a station for teens and run by them -- an idea that several people I have talked to are in favor of, including myself. But who has the millions and millions of dollars needed to buy a station? =20

The possibility of teen-radio station training centers across the country could only occur if LPFM were approved. Imagine the skills the youths might learn. =20
Imagine the benefits the community might receive from their insights and programs. America was built by people who dreamed and then, through hard work, turned their dreams into action. From action into reality. =20

My dream is that youths, especially minorities, have more opportunities to learn broadcasting skills. One way is the creation of LPFM. Your hard work can help turn this dream, and the dreams of many youths interested in learning radio skills, into a reality. So, please, keep fighting on their behalf = and on behalf of all radio listeners who are hungry to hear more and more diverse voices on the radio. =20

Sincerely yours,

Carlos Briceno
