

I support the creation of Low Power FM stations. With the increasing corporatization of the air waves I believe it is imperative to insure that the airwaves are available to those who don't work within the corporate framework. I also think that it is important to preserve the magic of radio:

if the corporations are the only ones who determine what we listen to it is clear (judging from what they currently spew into the air) that there will be only a narrow range of voices heard. Low Power FM is a great idea.
