

Studies of Broadband over Power Line technology has shown that HF radio interference to amateur radio communications would be unacceptable. Weak signals can be completely covered by these emmissions. Studies have shown that these emissions can exceed 60dBuV at 30 meters. This is an unacceptable interference level to both amateur and other communication systems.

Thank you,
Darrell Upton