

I would love to see BPL come into my area. I am located in rural Alabama and it seems I am unimportant to either the phone company or the cable company. We just got cable with more than 13 channels a couple months ago, but the service (small systems digital) is awful. Everyone near me has a dish. I did try the cable for a few months and found out for myself how bad it was. I was paying nearly 100.00 per month for expanded basic cable with no movie channels and the reception was terrible. I guess all that money I was paying was going towards upgrades in the larger area because there sure weren't in in my area. Maybe if the power company got involved the distance limitations would be different than for cable and phone lines and I could enjoy the high speed Internet like the people in larger cities have.