

This could pose an immense problem to the Amateur Radio Service. What safeguards are there to prevent spurious emissions that would render HF communications useless to a ham operator like me? I have enough problems with powerline interference now, I fear this will only make it worse.