

I am concerned about the interference to receivers that will be generated by PLC broadband technology. I have seen studies and testimonials about the results where it has been tried overseas. The power companies in my area don't maintain their insulators until their leakage causes significant interference. Rectification at faulty connections could cause interference across the whole spectrum. Underground power lines would probably be relatively free from radiating interference, but the power feeds are above ground in most locations, including mine.