

I am greatly concerned with the impact on existing radio services (including amateur) by the broadband nature of digital data. Power lines are not a "closed" system, like cable TV. Also, users of PLC networks might suffer interference from legitimate RF users of the spectrum slice planned for the service. This would serve no one's interests. Cable or DSL services would most likely serve as a better conduit for high speed internet access.