

As a radio amateur (WA4CIT) I am very concerned about the likelihood of high hrequency radio frequency interference with Power Line Communications.

The amateur radio service is an important resource for the United States. It provides emergency communications, and creative new technologies through its widespread pool of enthusiasts.

It is very likely that Power Line Communications will produce significant, crippling levels of RFI to hams like me.

Please note my opposition to this use of the power grid.