

I am an Amateur Extra radio operator. I have been following closely the research involving BPL technology. I find little evidence that this technology will not affect the amateur bands for which I am permitted to operate. On the contrary it appears that in my home which is surrounded by power lines I will be subjected to substantial interference, even if I do not use BPL in my home. I would suggest that a great deal more research is needed on its effect on other licensed services before any thought of permitting or promoting it is allowed. Sincerely,
Bela W. Lindenfeld (N8SHZ)