

We must congratulate the FCC for finally finding a way to kill Amateur Radio with the latest in their bag of tricks, "BPL" or as the FCC would call it, "Power line Carrier". We guess now that the department of Homeland Security has been formed, its proponents no longer feel our country has any further need for the benefits of a strong reliable low cost communication emergency backup that Amateur Radio has always provided. For shame. After watching the way the FCC dealt with the News ownership deregulation issue, it is clear that the FCC Chair now only listens to the campaign financiers. WE only hope the FCC and our country will not live to regret the hastiness of the chairmans actions. A Veteran.
