

The FCC requires power companies to correct leaking radiation which causes interference to other users of radio spectrum, and in many cases it takes at least a letter from the FCC to get the utility to correct the situation. BPL will cause the types of interference prohibited by the FCC rules. The amateur community needs a commitment from the FCC and utilities to ensure such interference will be eliminated.