

BPL technology is known to cause severe interference to HF (shortwave) communications that use the same spectrum. BPL has been banned in Japan for this reason. Many alternate technologies exist to provide superior high speed data access without the disruptive interference. This technology should not be approved for use in the U.S.