

As an active extra class amateur radio operator, I am apalled at the mere thought of jeopardizing the proud amateur service and feel this is not consistent with the FCC's intent concerning low power operation. I have been an amateur for over 40 years, and hope to continue the enjoy the hobby into the future. I also believe that the interests of shortwave broadcasters is also in peril. Please consider the interests of entities other than the big commercial power companies and internet services. There is suffient enough technology available now that BPL is not a necessary evil and should not be allowed to progress any further.

Dwain Johnson, WOCL
Commercial General Radiotelephone (Former First Radiotelephone) Operator