

As an amateur radio operator who is committed to helping my community during emergency conditions, I feel that BRL should not be permitted to go forward. Turning every power line into a RF emitter will throw so much noise from this lines that radio communication will be almost impossible. The power companies aren't trying to provide a service that cannot be adequately provided by others. There are scores of broadband providers who are currently not causing unnecessary interference. They are simply trying to pad their already generous bottom line, with no consideration as to the negative environmental and communications impact it will certainly cause. Please put a stop to this action and deny the power companies the right to transmit BRL.
