

Just as electricity transformed rural American 70 years ago, I believe broadband technology will again transform rural America. However, in order for members of our electric cooperative to play a role in this transformation, they must have access. Unfortunately, most of our members will never have broadband service using current technology. As long as BPL technology doesn't interfere with other services, I believe BPL is an option that must be explored and taken advantage of for the greater good of our rural communities.
