

I recognize the potential benefits of BPL technologies and I feel the growth of the internet is important to the economy and to the quality of lives of the general public. However, I feel the industry should be held to the same standards as everyone else. These standards were created to protect an important resource which is meant to be shared by the private sector, various government agencies, and the military. If BPL is to prove to be a viable technology it is going to have to co-exist with existing technologies. I am a member on the ARRL and I fully support their efforts to preserve the radio spectrum for future generations of Americans. Thank you for your time and consideration.
