

I oppose the use of broadband over power lines without effective safeguards to prevent interference with the amateur bands. The current power line noise level is bad enough. The amateur service's ability to provide homeland security communications will be dramatically impaired otherwise.