

I am both astounded and horrified at the Commissioners' uncritical and premature embracement of BPL without due consideration of the potentially devastating effects on other wireless services. Commercial power distribution systems (many old and in poor condition) were not designed for BPL. It seems to me that, if the Commission wishes to promote high-speed internet access, it should focus its attention on satellite-based services instead.