

As a licensed amateur radio operator I am concerned that the use of power lines to transmit internet signals will cause interference to my hobby. I have a cable modem at my house. The cable modem is very fast. All we need now is to make it easy for people to use the internet while they drive their cars. Ham radio operators are an asset to the community. The radio signal gets through when other modes of communications fail. Unshielded power lines usage, bad idea!