

The recent ARRL field tests prove that BPL is much more than just a future potential problem that we should keep our eye on. It's now obvious that BPL interferes with HF/VHF communications on a horrific level. If widely implemented, BPL would mean the death of the amateur radio service as we know it -- along with its continuing contributions to technical innovation, public service, and international communications.