

I hope the FCC will not loosen the regulations and interference requirements for BPL technology. I would hate to see the frequencies used by Amateur radio for national and world wide public service communications put in jeopardy, because of interference problems created by the power companies. I realize they can already use this technology, but I believe there should be quality control in the use of the technology.