

I have read the opinions and the informal test report results put forth by the power companies and the ARRL and, as an engineer and an Amateur Extra class licensee OPPOSE this proposition on the grounds that it is technically infeasible, as shown by field strength measurements made at two alpha test sites, and practically infeasible as demonstrated by the power companies' inability to make their existing system operate as designed on a continuous basis.