

Re: Docket ET 03-104 concerning the use of power lines to transmit radio frequency information:

I spent the last 24 hours during the Michigan power blackout on an Amateur Radio (HAM) net for Oakland County Emergency Management that provided emergency communications for hospitals, etc. The FCC proposal is likely to degrade or eliminate this service. We Hams are called amateurs but we are FCC-licensed professionals where radio interference is concerned. Thank you.