

The ARRL has filed comments and I want to add my voice in support of their research, tests and position in this matter.

Please do not approve the use of BPL.

Contaminating the airwaves with the spurious emission of RF from power lines would be an error of great technological short sightedness. There are already wires entering every home and business in this country capable of providing internet connectivity. The radio spectrum should be kept clear for, not only the uses it serves today, but the developments in radio communication of tomorrow - emergency, military, even the personal enjoyment of private citizens.
