

Dear FCC,

I'm writing to express my opposition to the use of "Boadband over Powerline" technology. My wife and I are both active ham radio amateurs. We work closely with our local Emergency Operations Center on many communications projects. We are very interested in emergency communications, and have thousands of dollars invested in our equipment. This method of transferring data has been proven to be harmful to radio transmissions in many countries. I am Very concerned that it will destoy our ability to communicate. Please consider what this means in our post 9-11 world, and how paralyzed the Northeast was last weekend without power. My equipment can function completely on solar electricity.

Thank you for your consideration, Jay and Jennifer Nabholz
