

With the recent east coast power blackout where power actually changed direction what would happen to any PC connected to this system? It seems to me there could also be health issues stemming from excess RFI. Does the BPL system have adequate filters to protect users from harm?