

Amateur radio operators have consistently demonstrated their ability to provide essential communications in public service. BPL has the potential to severely interfere with amateur communications. If BPL is implemented without assurance that its emissions will not affect amateur communications, amateurs may never again be able to respond reliably in emergencies, as they have done so often in the past.