

I think this powerline broadband system will be both a disaster for amateur, shortwave, emergency communications; But will also be found to be an insecure a system as it can be for it's users. Not to mention that this unshielded system is a source of broadband RF pollution, and will also be open to interference, intentional jamming, and other threats to it's performance. A dumb idea all around