

I would like to give full support to the concept of broadband over power lines. For those of us too far from either telephone switching or cable access, TCP/IP over power is the only hope we have for affordable broadband and a chance to join the urban areas in the digital age.