

I am concerned about radio frequency interference generated by the proposed Broadband Over Power Line system.

It's inherent in the layout of overhead power lines that they become broadcast antennas for this service.

Although new competition in broadband service is welcome, this proposed system would interfere unreasonably with existing services.

For the record I am not an amateur radio operator, although I understand that they are upset. They are not the only ones, however.