

electric company broadband is technically feasible, but inadvisable, due to the propensity for interference with so many other broadcasting frequencies. This is especially true for Ham radio and shortwave, which are necessary sources of information in times of emergency. until the technology improves, I conclude that it is necessary to exclude it.