

Broadband over power lines is not a good idea. It was rejected in Japan because of the radio interference problems. Tests in England indicate significant radio interference problems, as well.